Dear Friends and Partners,

Its been a busy couple of weeks since we spoke last. I attended the Global Petroleum Show in Calgary last Wednesday, and that was very impressive. Actually, my lunch at Teatro's was pretty darn good too. I was privy to a tour of the restaurant's kitchen and private dining room as well -ask for it next time you're in.

The Oil Show is touted as the largest one in the world. With huge displays, machinery and exhibits throughout, you'll believe it is. I met folks from across North America as well as from varied parts of the Middle East. There was some amazing technology and ingeniously creative devices. There is a ton of money, time and commitment being put in the Oilsands and the Energy industry as a whole.

Despite BP's massive black spot (both literally and figuratively) there are many individuals in the energy industry that care about what they do and have designed better ways to harmonize with the earth.

Here's a snippet from the show: Based on a followup survey after the 2008 show, DMG figures $25 billion in deals came together in the following 12 months thanks to contacts made during the threeday affair. "They were selling $1-million pieces of equipment right off the show floor, so I would anticipate a very similar number," Scott said. I'll be up in Fort McMurray at the end of the month seeing that very same technology put to use.

Grey Cup Big Economic Boos For Edmonton

By Clara Ho, City Hall Bureau. June 8th, 2010

Edmonton could reap huge economic benefits when the Grey Cup comes to town this November, especially with all tickets sold out five months before the big event, some say. "An event like the Grey Cup has the potential to bring in a significant amount of external visitors to Edmonton.

These expenditures of these visitors, over the duration of their stay, will stimulate and enhance the local economy," said Matt Jeneroux, of the Edmonton Economic Development Corporation. GRAB THIS STORY

Alberta Competitiveness On Stelmach Agenda
'Time to re-evaluate' how province fares

By Jason Fekete, Calgary Herald; Canwest News Service June 1, 2010

With its retooling of provincial energy royalties complete, the Stelmach government is launching the next step of a larger competitiveness strategy that will examine reforms in four other key sectors of the Alberta economy. Agriculture (grains and oil seeds), financial services, manufacturing and petrochemicals are in the province's crosshairs, as it looks to improve Alberta's competitive position both domestically and internationally.
